The Unification of a Nation and a School

The year 1965 marks the centennial of the end of the War Between the States and of the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln. We living today realize more and more the important significance of the principles and beliefs for which this man stood, especially during the recent fast-moving, eventful times.

The unification of the states, which followed the Civil War, was essential for the full growth and development of the United States. We, the students and faculty of the Caston School Corporation, have also undergone a unification, one which is likewise essential for our full growth and developments as students and as responsible American citizens.

The United States was more than fortunate in having a President of Lincoln's capability during the bitter struggle. Lincoln was a man of simplicity, a fact which added to his genius. His ascension to the Presidency is an American ideal.

Concerning his education, Lincoln said: "There were some schools, so called, but no qualification was ever required of a teacher beyond 'readin' and 'cipherin' to the rule of three. If a straggler supposed to understand Latin happened to sojourn in the neighborhood, he was looked upon as a wizard."

Like other boys and girls of his time, he made his own arithmetic textbook. Several pages of this book are still in existence. Abraham worked his arithmetic problems on boards which he shaved clean with a drawing knife and used again and again.

Even as a boy, Lincoln showed ability as a speaker. Often he amused himself and others by standing on a stump and imitating some preacher or politician who had recently spoken in the neighborhood.

Lincoln's inability to secure a minimum education did not keep him from becoming the President of the United States.

During his years in the White House, Lincoln's paramount objective was the unification of the states. "The fight must go on. The cause of civil liberty must not be surrendered at the end of one or even one hundred defeats." The preceding quote shows also his deep conviction for the rights of man.

Lincoln knew that our great heritage, which our forefathers had founded and cherished so, must not be risked or destroyed because of misunderstanding, and that after the war, the nation must settle its differences and resume its role as a united democracy. Although he never saw his plans for Reconstruction executed, the great faith that he placed on man caused him not to be concerned about the future of the United States.

The cannons of the Civil War have long been silent and its heroes long dead. We must turn our attention toward the present. In the unification of the Caston School Corporation, we too have experienced many problems. A healthy student attitude, an efficient student council, and the newly-formed steering committees have overcome many of these difficulties.

There is indeed a unique correlation between the unification of the United States and the unification of the Caston School Corporation. We must profit by its mistakes and work together to make our high school second to none.

Bobby Heckathorn and Bobby King prepare to raise the flag of the United States of America.

A School Year Unfolds Before Our Eyes.

Mr. Hattery and Mr. Cameron discuss one of the many problems of a unified Caston High School.

Caston buses carry the students to school, and the 1964-65 school year gets under way.

Kenny Ulerick and Mark Enyart drop a note in the suggestion box to make their opinions known.

Gloria Birk, John Stingley, Joan Leavell, and Jean Dague use the library facilities to aid them in their studies.

All is quiet and all minds are at work gaining knowledge, for study hall is a time for reading, writing, and preparing for the next class.

"I Will Study and Get Ready and Then Maybe the Chance Will Come."

—A. Lincoln

Tom Crimmins bends studiously over the dictionary to check the meaning of a word.

Wanda Townsend, Joyce Hizer, Loisann Hartzler, and Gloria Birk consult the principal on a question.

The bell rings and the halls come alive with students rushing to their next classes.

Yvonne Thomas takes advantage of a break in English 12 class to comment to Joyce Hizer on a recent test.

Students Find Ways to Break the Monotony

A date for Saturday night? Diana Bolen and Rick Jacko use their lunch hour to talk about more important things.

Brenda Fleming, Judy Williams, Diane Williams, and Rhea Rentschler discuss the latest Comet news during the break between classes.

Initiation Day created lasting impressions in the minds of Caston students. The outfits, planned by the Seniors, introduced Freshmen to the merriment of high school years.

of Never-ending Study

The whole study hall watches and smiles as Larry Rentschler slips Jessica Herrold a note across the aisle.

Let Charlie in on the joke, girls! Harriet Bonnell and Candy Lease break up over an incident in the lunch line.

A Prom Is Many Things to Many People.

... lively dancing enjoyed by both students and faculty members. Among the dancers are Mike Sullivan and Mr. and Mrs. Lebo who demonstrate how to twist up a storm.

... handsome couples arriving to join in the good times. Happy anticipation shows on the faces of Tim Burkhart and guest Connie Radke.

... special music featuring the voices of talented students such as Miss Diana Babb, who was then a senior of Caston.

To Caston It's . . .

... a realization of how tired one can get having fun. Suzanne Conrad and Susie Helms decide to rest a few minutes and just watch.

... wishing that the last dance would never have to end. Tom Angle and guest Susie Wilson join the other dancers in the last dance of the 1964 Junior-Senior Prom.

... the crowning of the royal couples of the Prom. Jeff Moss and Ann Warner were crowned King and Queen; Tom Crimmins and Nancy Heiland, Prince and Princess.

... getting ready to leave the country club, which holds many never-to-be-forgotten memories. David House and Donna Babb agree that it's been a wonderful night.

Daughters

JEANNIE LEMMON, SOUTH CAMPUS

The National Society of The Daughters of the American Revolution is an organization of women directly descended from persons who aided in the achievement of American independence. Its purposes are historical, educational, and patriotic.

Historical aims of the society include the preservation of historic shrines that keep alive the memory of the men and women who won American independence. The society encourages the study of history concerning the Revolutionary War, and maintains records of early America. Educational objectives include the promotion of schools and educational institutions. Patriotic purposes of the society are to develop patriotism among the American people, and to carry on the ideas which meant freedom for America.

An annual Good Citizenship Pilgrimage contest is run in high schools throughout the nation. At Caston, school classmates and the faculty choose one winner from each campus. Jeannie Lemmon won from South Campus while Yvonne Thomas won from North Campus. These winners then took an examination with other school winners from their respective counties.

YVONNE THOMAS, NORTH CAMPUS

Caston reached another milestone when Jeannie Lemmon was declared Cass Country's D.A.R. winner. She is the first girl from Caston ever to receive such an award.

The tests are then sent to the state where a state winner is determined. The state winner receives a trip to Washington D.C.

Senior One Foot

When Rev. Spence, his trouble-getting-into-children, and attractive wife walk into the run-down parsonage at their new parish, it's quite a shock . . . but that's only the beginning. Rev. Spence finds the church building starting to disintegrate, and congregation split into warring factions, and the choir "a cross between the devil's grandmother and a swarm of mountain wildcats" . . . and that's not the worst. The town is being poisoned by bigotry, and Eileen and Hartzell, his teenage children, are disgusted at having been yanked out of a comfortable parsonage and a swell high school. But then Hartzell meets pretty Louise, and Eileen is introduced to the football captain.

Play in Heaven

The uproarious complications that result make even more difficulties for Rev. Spence. His struggle to build a new church, organize a new choir, and crush intolerance, leads to a pitched battle among his flock, and then the threat of being dismissed from the clergy. On the day he is to leave, Spence has a minor accident that puts him in bed. At the same time, Hartzell's personal complications have led him not only to the brink of romantic disaster, but right into the local hoosegow . . . and just when the entire future of the Spence family depends on him. The surprising, whirlwind conclusion brings down the curtain on an inspiring, and yet laugh-packed evening's entertainment.

With this book, you hold in your hand the world of Caston High School.

A History of the Year

Years from now, as you pick up this Exodus and strum through its pages, we hope that you will recall the many events which have enriched your high school days and your life. The hard work which the Exodus staff exerted in making this chronicle of events, activities, and fond remembrances will then be worthwhile.

The planning, construction, editing, and release of the 1965 Exodus has been the foremost duty of the senior class, a duty of which we have been very proud. The 1965 Exodus has been especially constructed for you, and its success will depend upon you, its owner.

High school life has recently gained many new aspects, thereby becoming an exciting experience with many faucets which affect the students' lives both now and forever. This yearbook, as any such record of events, is a most important literary accomplishment, because it can very well determine the attitude with which you will in later years regard your sojourn in Caston High School. It has therefore been with meticulous care and great pride that we have presented the 1965 EXODUS.

Comments Staff Efforts Strengthened Unification of the Caston Campuses.

Class and school news, gossip, sports, and humor were a few of the many interesting articles that appeared this year in the school newspaper, CASTON COMMENTS. Not to be left out were the many literary accomplishments of the students. The editors and combined staff from the two campuses strived to make the newspaper a work of interest to teachers and pupils alike, a way for the students to express their opinions, and a means of better intercampus communication and understanding. Working toward these ends, they spent many industrious hours getting each eagerly-awaited issue into circulation. The various editors learned new values of journalism, while the typists gained in the knowledge of office efficiency.

Student Council Members Received a Fresh Look

A student council is invested with the greatest responsibility that a high school organization can receive—that of governing the student body. To meet this responsibility, a student council must be progressive and must be composed of many important elements.

The Caston High School Student Council met early in the school year and, under the supervision of its sponsor, Mr. Gresham Bearss, adopted a new constitution and elected its new officers. Membership in the council was made up of two members of the Junior and Senior classes of each campus, one member of the Freshman and Sophomore classes of each campus, and one representative of each school organization.

on Democracy Through Their Governing Duties.

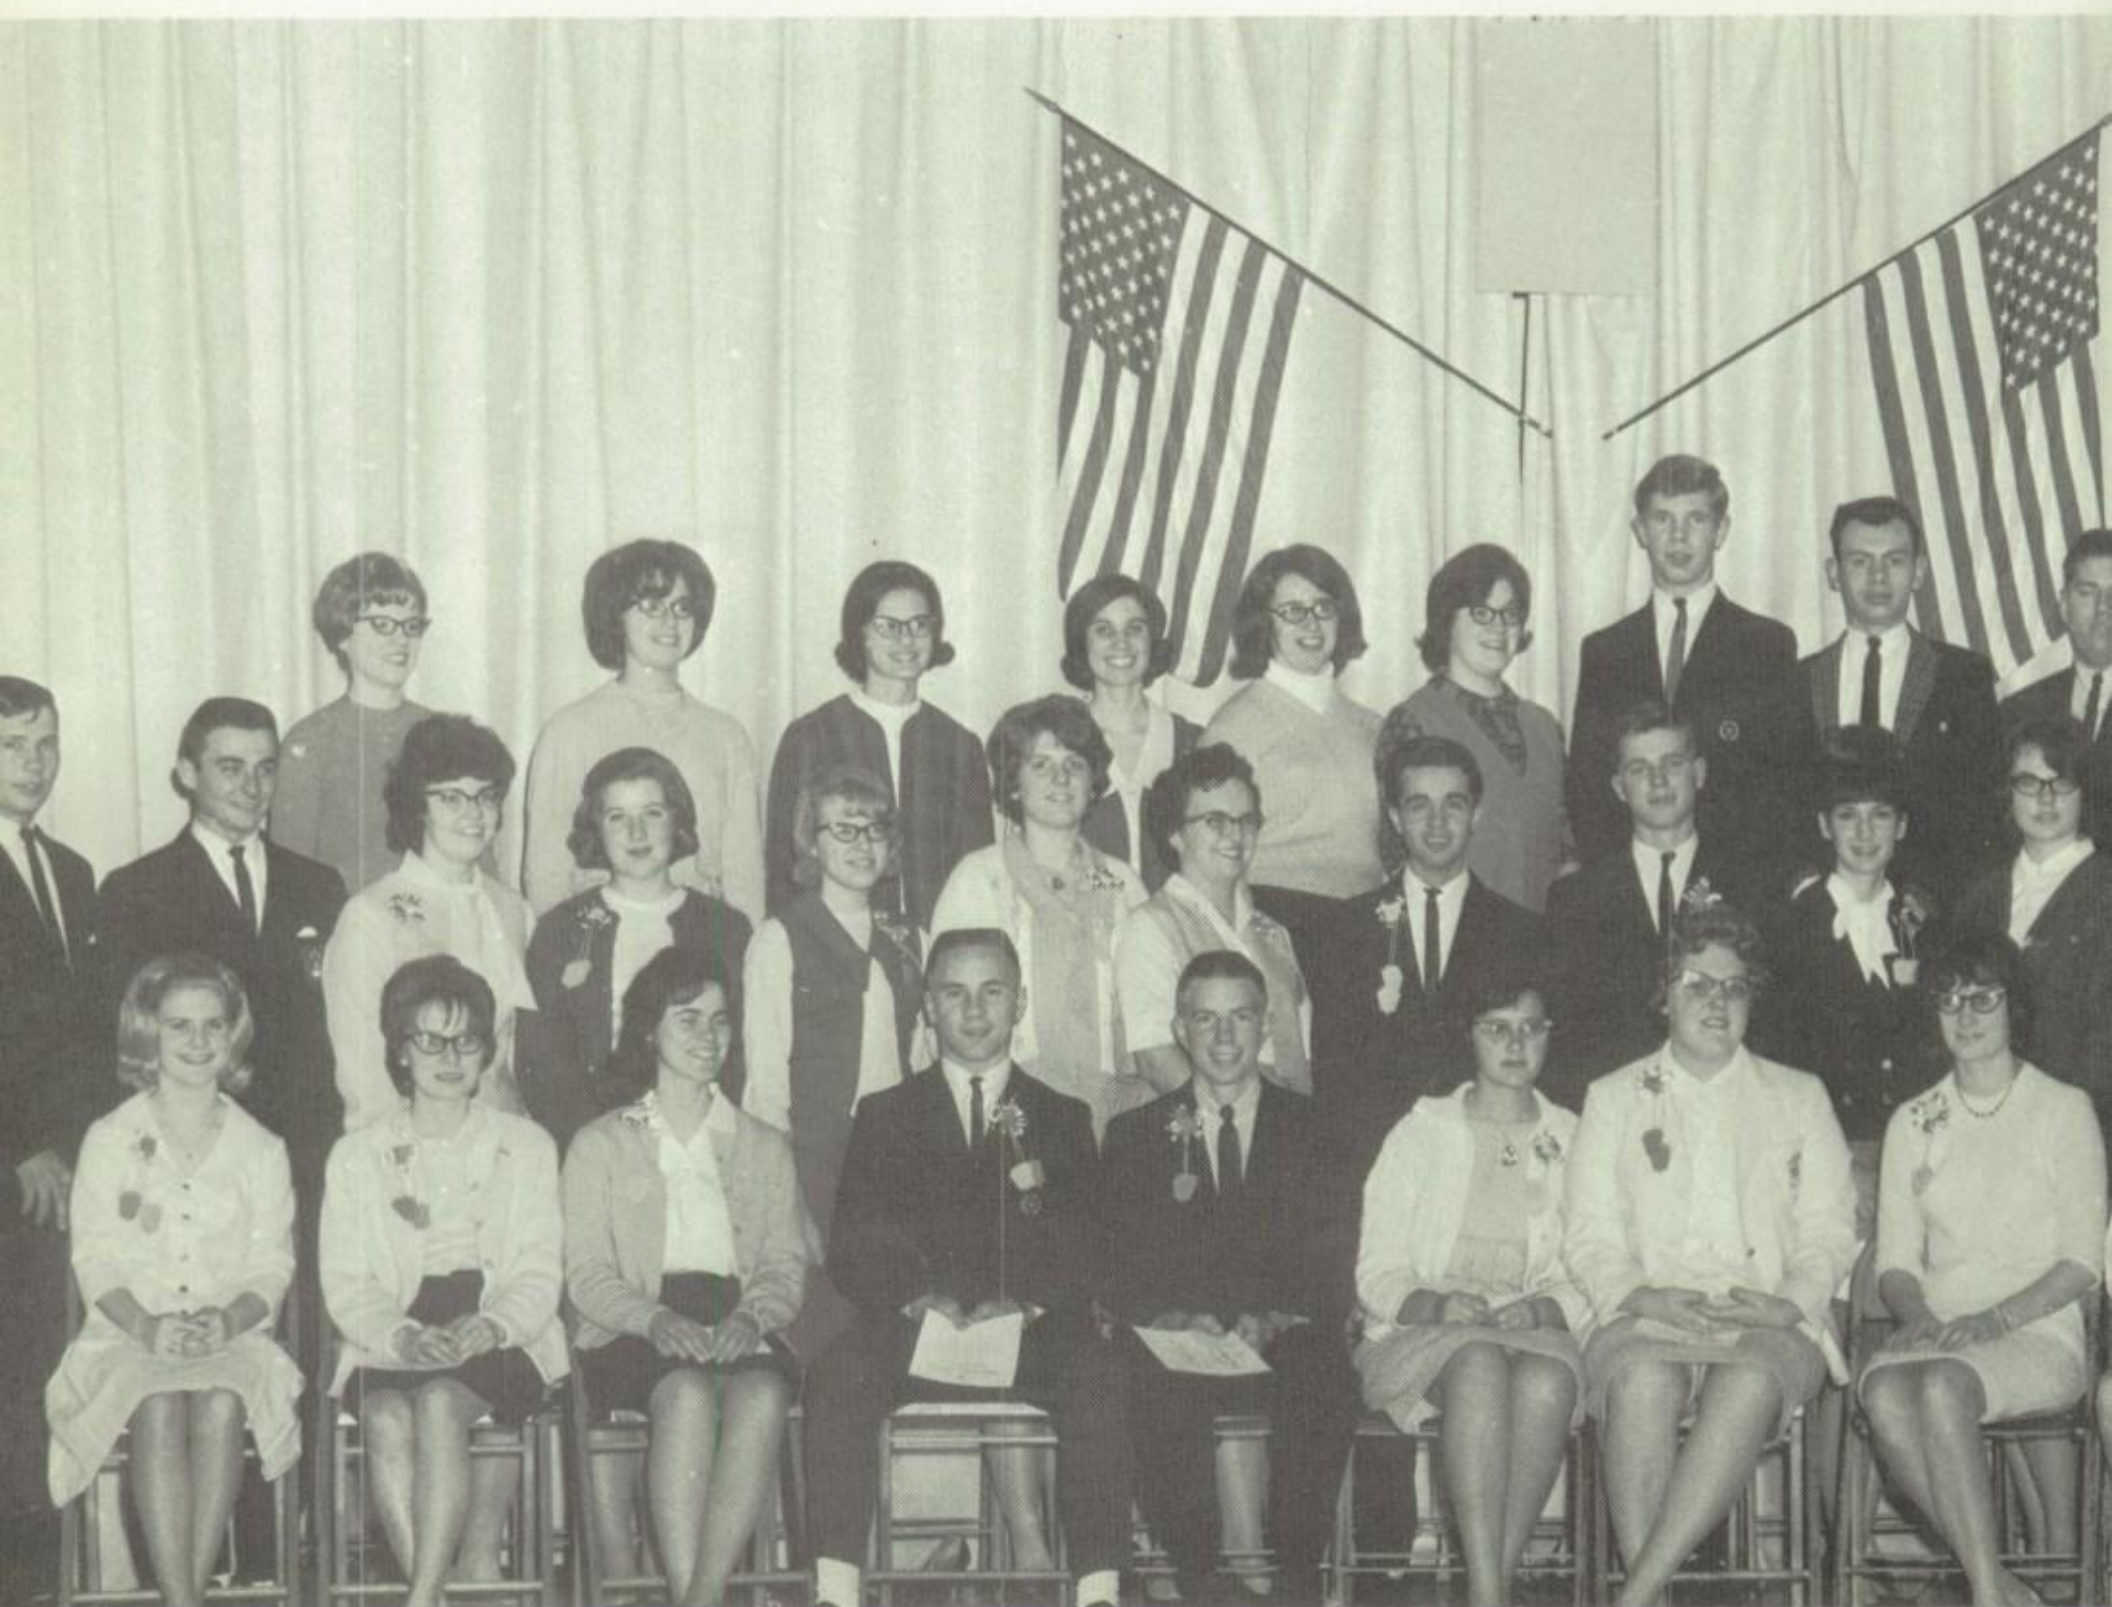

By rule of its constitution, the Caston Student Council met on the second Tuesday of every month to carry on its regular business. To take care of extra matters, however, special sessions or committee meetings were often held.

Besides voting to approve or disapprove parties and other activities of the various organizations, the council also was active in sponsoring extra-curricular activities of its own. An outstanding example of this was the donation given by the Caston students to buy, as a Christmas gift, a television set for the Sangralea Valley Boys' Club.

This year's Caston High Student Council completed its duties well in promoting and understanding between the student body and the faculty, and in uniting the two campuses.

Character, Scholarship, Leadership and Service.

The National Honor Society became a reality in 1921 through the National Association of Secondary School Principals. When drawing up the constitution for the organization, the committee of the Association was faced with the realization that scholarship alone seemed too narrow a qualification for membership. On the other hand there was great danger of according too little recognition to scholarship. After considerable discussion, the committee fixed upon Character, Leadership, Scholarship, and Service as the fundamental virtues most worthy of encouragement.

The framework of the society was constituted by the original committee to permit a high degree of freedom for local chapters. Each chapter, however, operates under a constitution which has been approved by the National Council, and membership standards are closely regulated. Here in our own Caston Chapter, membership standards include maintaining a "B" average, contributions to the school in character, leadership, and service, and receiving and maintaining the vote of approval of all but one member of the faculty. It is generally recognized today that the National Honor Society has utilized its potentialities by setting high standards of conduct and achievement, and in so doing, it has gained noteworthy prestige and national recognition.

The Sunshine Society Develops

The Indiana State Sunshine Society was founded over fifty years ago. The society has as its major purpose helping others and spreading cheer. The emblem of the society is the Rising Sun, and its colors are yellow and white. "My Sunshine Girl" is its theme song, and its motto is simply but well expressed in "Others."

State-wide projects include informing high school girls of the many nursing schools throughout the state and providing a number of scholarships for those girls who sincerely wish to become professional nurses. The society's pet charity is the James Whitcomb Riley Children's Hospital in Indianapolis, Indiana. The local services rendered to the school and communities have made every chapter a valuable asset to its school's extra-curricular program.

Librarians Devoted Their Study Time to Aiding Fellow Students.

Student librarians sacrificed their study halls every day in order to be of service to teachers and pupils alike who needed help in finding information in the school libraries. Whether it was for school lessons or for pleasure reading, students always found the librarians ready and willing to search for the desired books.

Besides being a valuable aid to their fellow students, the librarians gained for themselves a knowledge in such library skills as the correct way of filing and finding books.

The Caston High School Pep Club consisted of nearly one hundred fifty students who were willing to give their best to back the team through both victory and defeat. With the realization that the team was out there on the floor fighting to play and win the games for them and their school, the students repayed the boys with cheers of praise and encouragement throughout the contests. Uniformed in red sweatshirts and following the rules and commands of the cheerleaders, the pep block set very impressive examples of the active school spirit and genuine pride in the team that should prevail in every cheering block. Each member owed a great deal to the club sponsors Mrs. Janice Herrold and Mrs. Jimmie Lebo, who worked hard and successfully to make the cheering block look and sound as impressive as it did.

The Marching Band Enlivened Ballgame Half-Times

Hard work and full co-operation made for impressive sights at basketball game half-times this year when the Caston High School Marching Band, following the whistled commands of the drum majorettes, performed several different shows for the entertainment of the game crowds. Usually averaging four practices a week, the marching Comets memorized tunes, steps, and positions in preparation for their lively performances.

Flag Corps Girls Spirited Marching Shows

The members of the Flag Corps played a vital part this year in the performances of the marching band. Learning steps and routines under the direction of the head flag corps girl, Judy Mullins, the girls added greatly to the enthusiasm, spirit, and impressiveness of the Caston Marching Band shows presented at the basketball game at the half of the reserve team game. Often featured in the shows, the corps, twirlers, and majorettes presented lively routines for the entertainment of the game audiences.

The girls belong to the flag corps purely for the fun and excitement that the performances give them. Each received credit for her participation.

Caston's Concert Band Specialized This Year in Contests . . .

The members of the concert band participated in contests this year both as a whole band and individually in district and state instrumental contests. As every band student will agree, contest day means hours of practice before hand, jittery nerves when it arrives, and sighs of relief and happiness when it is past.

Following an active calendar, the concert band presented a number of yuletide musical selections in the annual Christmas concert. Also, as has been the Caston custom, this group played for the commencement exercises for the graduating seniors.

. . . Entertainment . . .

Entertainment is always a specialty of the Caston bands, not only for the audience, but also for the band members themselves. Each student belongs to the organization because of the joy he finds in music—both in hearing it and in making it. Band period provides a break in a day of studies and offers a chance for the students to relax and be entertained.

. . . and Fun

Being a member of the Caston band means being with other students who share your interest in music, and with whom you can share such musical fun as impromptu duets or combos, playing the latest hits, and realizing the success of a performance. Fun has always been a real part of band, but this year, it has been doubly so because of the successful combining of the bands of the two campuses into one.

The Stage Band, which specialized in dance band selections, was also a source of musical fun for its members.

We Raise Our Voices in Song

This year's chorus at Caston High School was very active in the world of vocal music. Under the fine instruction of Mr. C. L. Berdine and accompanied by fellow student Jim Clemons, the chorus spent hours rehearsing and memorizing songs for participation in programs such as the Teachers' Institute in South Bend, Indiana. The annual Christmas festival was a highlight of the year for this choral group, which provided the audience with impressive sights and sounds. Singing is always at its best for the chorus when preparations are being made for the annual fun show "Caston Capers." Vocal contests were also a center of interest and participation for several students.

Chorus members of the two campuses discovered this year the advantages of combining the two choral groups into one. By meeting and working together regularly twice weekly, the chorus members created harmony in both the songs they sang and in the unification of Caston High School.

Varsity and Reserve Cheerleaders Spirited Team Efforts

Caston High School's Varsity and Reserve Team cheerleaders did a terrific job this year in leading the Comet boosters, in setting an excellent example for our school, and in keeping the competitive spirit alive throughout the games. The girls are to be saluted for fulfilling well all their duties as cheerleaders, which go far beyond athletic abilities alone.

Mr. Ronald Leba, Head Coach

We of the EXODUS Staff and the entire student body of Caston High School are proud of the athletic achievements attained this year, made possible by our coaching staff.

These men are respected not only for their abilities as leaders of our athletic teams, but also for the outstanding job they do as teachers. They are to be commended for their fine job.

Mr. Martin Torgenson, Assistant Coach

COACHES

Serving Caston High School as Athletic Director is Mr. Charles E. "Casey" Jones. In his capacity as Athletic Director, he schedules games, handles all ticket sales, and is in charge of purchasing all sporting goods. This has been a tremendous job for Mr. Jones, because of the limited capacity of our gym which hampered ticket sales and caused many games to be moved.

English—Basis for Learning

Education can be fun as well as interesting.

Mr. Graham lectures English class.

We believe that the study of grammar is a prerequisite to the correct use of written and oral language. Without a sound knowledge of grammar, few students will ever appreciate the beauty and complexity of their native tongue.

The study of English is basic to any other subject. The student who cannot read easily and intelligently can never hope to master any subject, and will never obtain enough education to fit him to compete for jobs in this highly competitive modern world.

The study of literature is also an important part of English.

Sprechen Sie Deutsch?

Learning German is not only interesting but is also fun.

German class was looked forward to by all the German students. The German language with its guttural sounds and fascinating vocabulary was a challenge to all. The students enjoyed singing songs in German and translating them in order to learn the pronunciation.

Debbie Carr speaks German into the tape-recorder.

Home Economics—a Way of Life

Mrs. Brown shows Carol Patton how to cut a pattern.

Home Ec. students were taught proper etiquette.

Many girls at Caston are interested in our Home Economics classes. The classes provide girls with a knowledge of child-care, sewing, food preparation, and home management which includes budgeting of time and money.

The girls learn practical application by making garments in class, and studying design of furniture and architecture.

By combining the skills learned in class this year with the attitudes formed, these girls are better prepared to be successful homemakers and successful citizens of tomorrow.

The Home Ec. girls prepare a meal.

Farming with a Future

Vocational Agriculture instruction is given by Mr. Van Matre at both Campuses.

In agriculture class prospective farmers and students that plan to hold jobs that are related to agriculture studied modern farming techniques. Crops, livestock and livestock diseases, soil improvement, fertilizers, machinery and its maintenance, and pest control were the different topics studied in agriculture.

Shop was also included in agriculture at Caston. Thus the future farmers put what they have learned in books into practical use. They were taught the names of all shop tools, how to weld, general repair of farm machinery and how to overhaul engines. Students brought in machinery to be repaired and farm implement dealers also donated used machinery.

Ag. students learn woodworking in shop class.

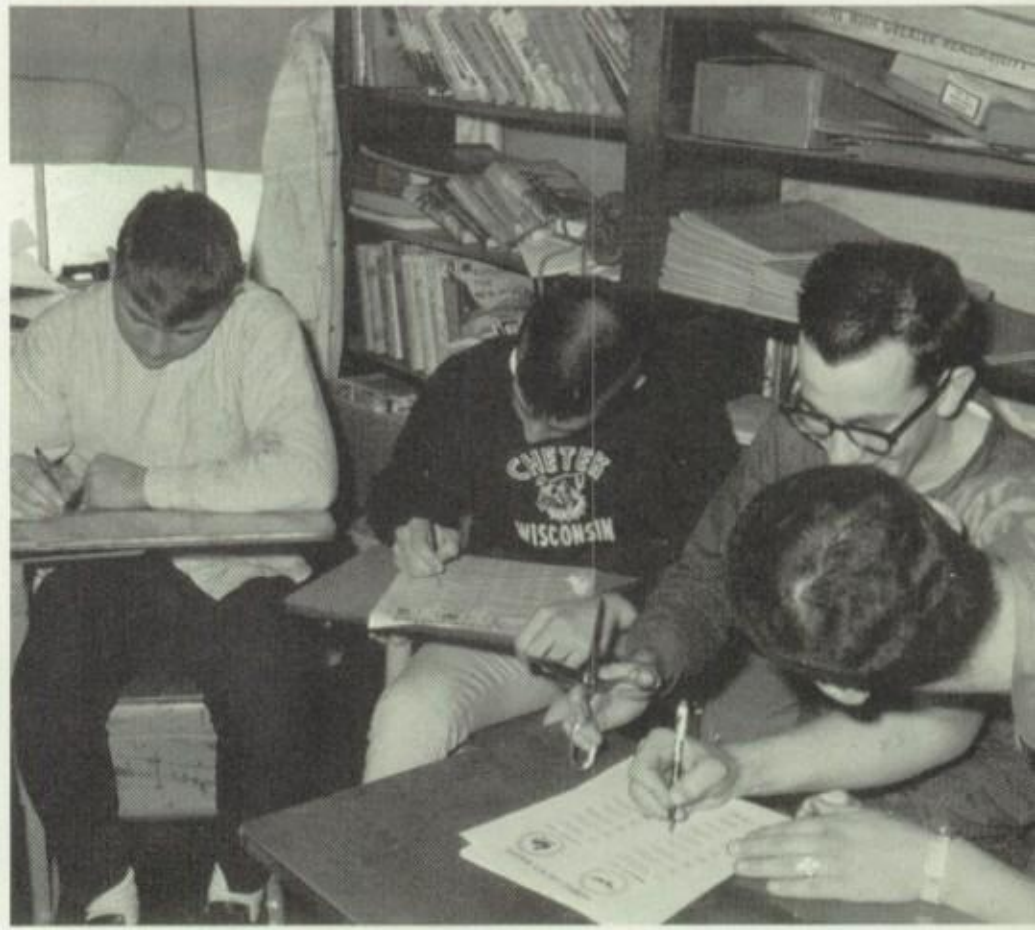

Students learn how to repair farm equipment in shop class, also.

Social Studies Develops Patriotic Respect in Students

Mr. Lebo points out a place on the map for American History students.

Seniors vote in mock election.

"Democracy, my friends, is a very poor form of government, but let me remind you that all the others are so much, much worse."—Churchill

At Caston we tried to impress upon students the truth of this quotation. Students were taught general history in Junior High; World History for sophomores; U.S. History for juniors; and Government for seniors. The purposes of all these courses were to help the student see the disadvantages and weaknesses of our form of government as well as its advantages and strengths. Our hope was, then, that attitudes of loyalty, respect, and appreciation would be a natural result of this instruction.

Mr. Bearss gives a government test to the seniors about once a week.

Business Men and Women of Tomorrow

Typing—A skill that saves time in the business world.

At Caston we offer several courses to the student who wishes to enter the business world. Two years of typing, shorthand, bookkeeping, and general business courses are offered. These courses are given in order to teach the student the importance of keeping accurate records for all of us will have to keep financial records in our lifetime. These courses are important also because they will help the student acquire and hold a valuable job.

Shorthand helps those planning secretarial work.

"Now I got it!" says Ann Scotten. "Assets equals liabilities plus proprietorship."

Art Students Reproduce Beauty

Mary Ruth Henderson designs her home of the future.

Art is one of the courses offered that allows the student to develop his creative ability into something worthwhile. Many students are preparing to major in art in college or intend to use it later in their jobs.

Art, we believe, develops in the student a respect for the beautiful and the ability to create, whether it be paper mache, drawing, fashion design, or painting.

Mrs. Alder shows Dan Brumett a new trick.

Dennis A. Feece shows his talent with paint.

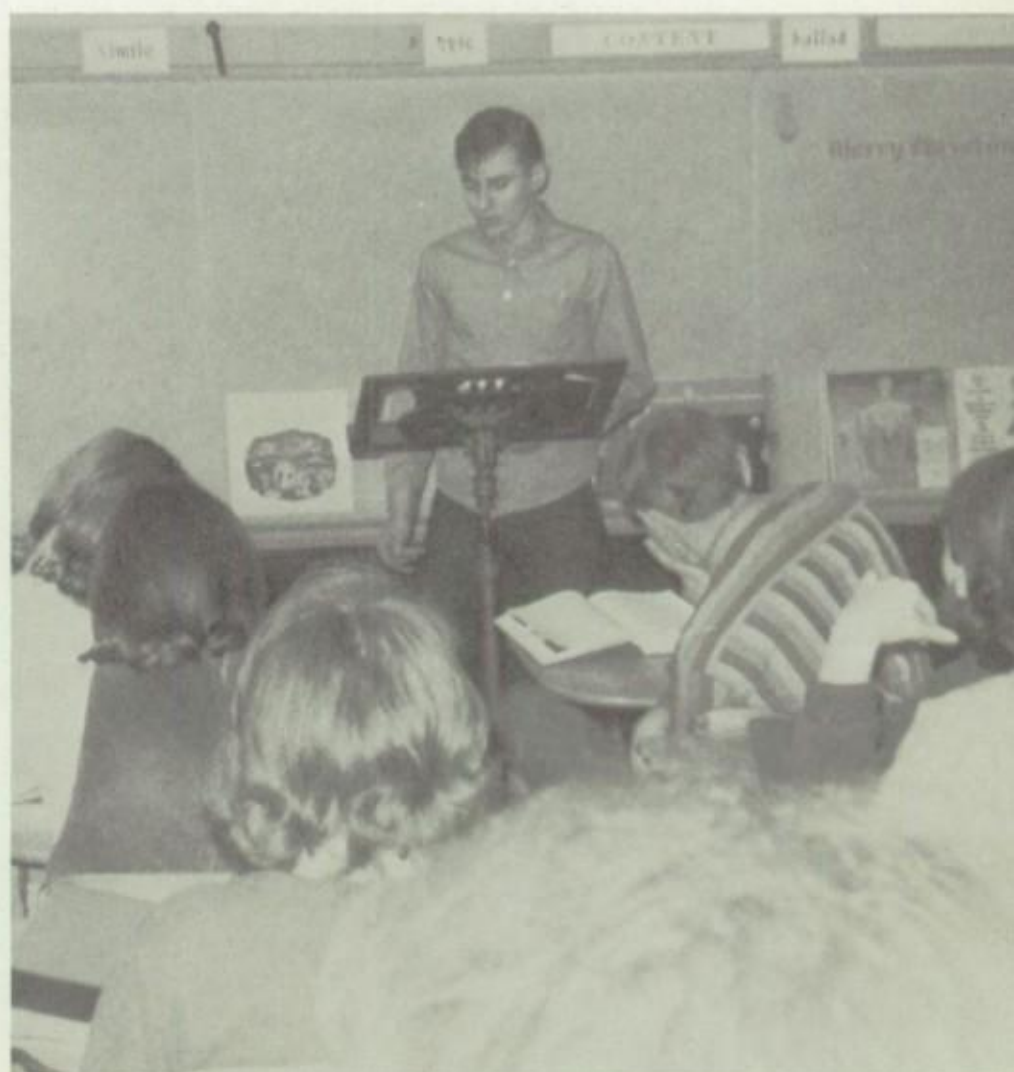

Fundamentals of Fine Speaking

According to my recent accumulation of facts . . .

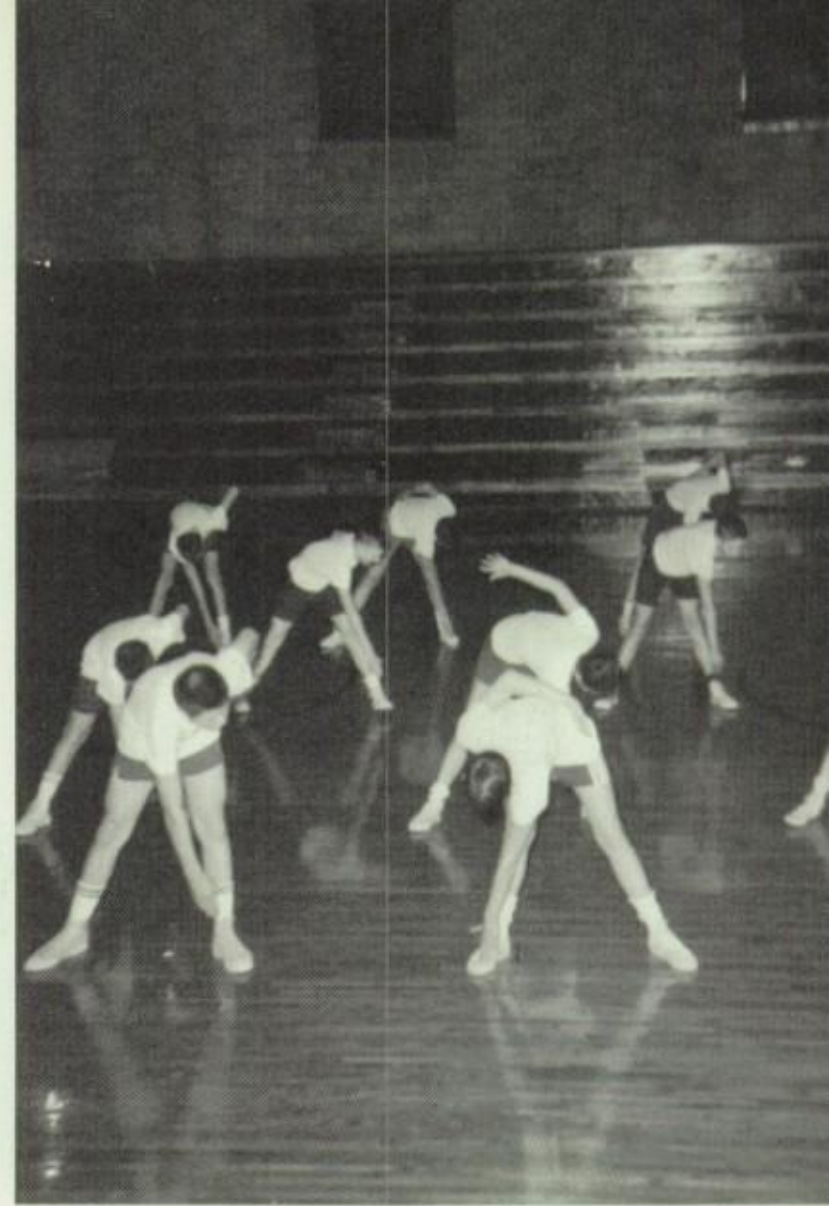

First of all, I don't know what I'm doing up here!

Rick Pressel expounds before his classmates!

The ups and downs of P.E. class.

Unco-ordinated physical fitness!

Exercise Stimulates the Mind and Body

Mrs. Herrold demonstrates a new trick in P.E. class.

Physical Education is perhaps one of the most important phases for the students at Caston High School. It plays a very important part in the physical development of the student. Although it sometimes seems very tiring it is necessary for the student physically as well as mentally. By being physically fit a student feels much better and therefore feels more like studying. It is important for everyone to realize the necessity for this program and for being in good physical condition. This can certainly mean a better and healthier person.

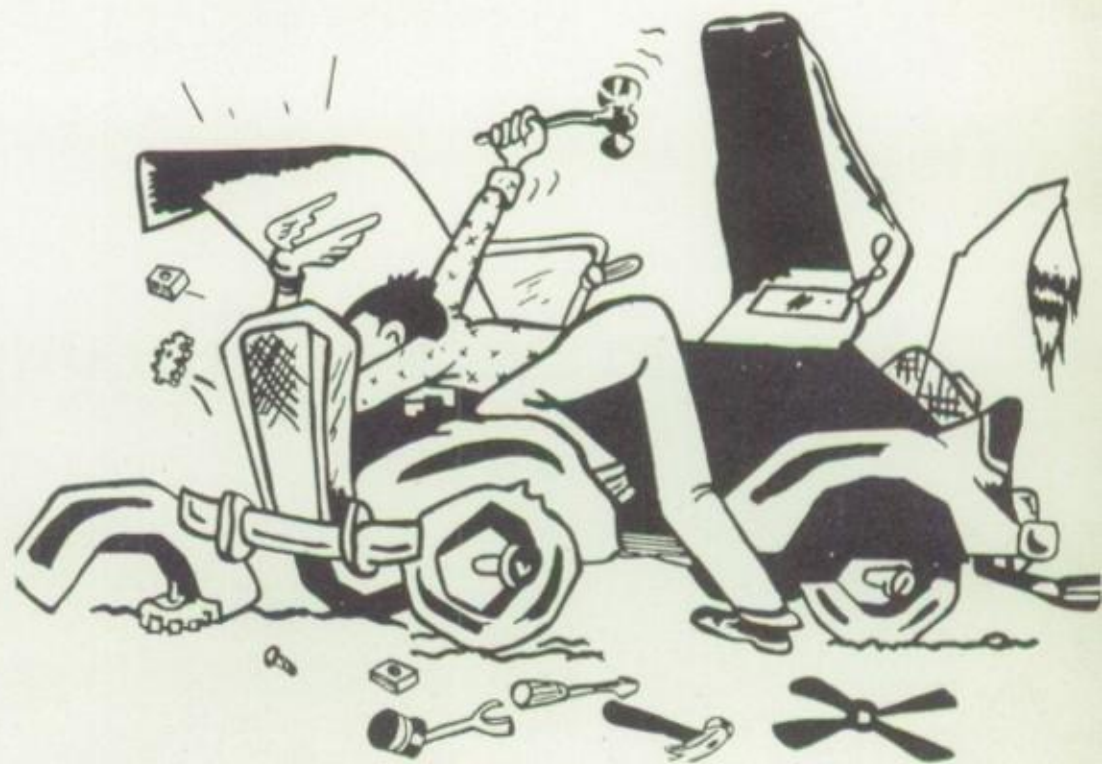

Students Prepare to Drive Down the Highways of Life

The drivers training class prepares for a drive.

For the student who wishes to learn to drive, a drivers' training course is offered. The course teaches the fundamentals of good driving. Including good safety practices and wise use of the car. The student learns about the many types of insurance and what to do in case of an accident.

This course brings out the great amount of responsibility that rests on each and every driver. The fundamentals the student learns in this class may save his life and the life of others.

Mr. Howard points out the different parts of the engine and how they function.

With the increased emphasis placed upon science in our society in recent years, physical science was added to the curriculum of the Caston High School. This offering affords the student a four year program in science rather than the three years offered in most schools throughout Indiana. Contrasted with Biology, physical science deals with the study of these things which are non-living. It included the science of chemistry, physics, meteorology, astronomy, and geology. The course is designed to provide general information for the student who uses this as a terminal science course as well as to serve as an introduction into science for the student who plans to major in this field. Chemistry is the science of the makeup of substances and the changes that take place in them. A course of high school chemistry teaches a student the fundamentals of chemistry: The different kinds of reaction and why they take place, how to form and balance formulas, and the elements. The course helps to explain the reactions of substances that a person will come in contact with in everyday life.

Now to add a little jump to the formula, we add a small dab of nitro-glycerine.

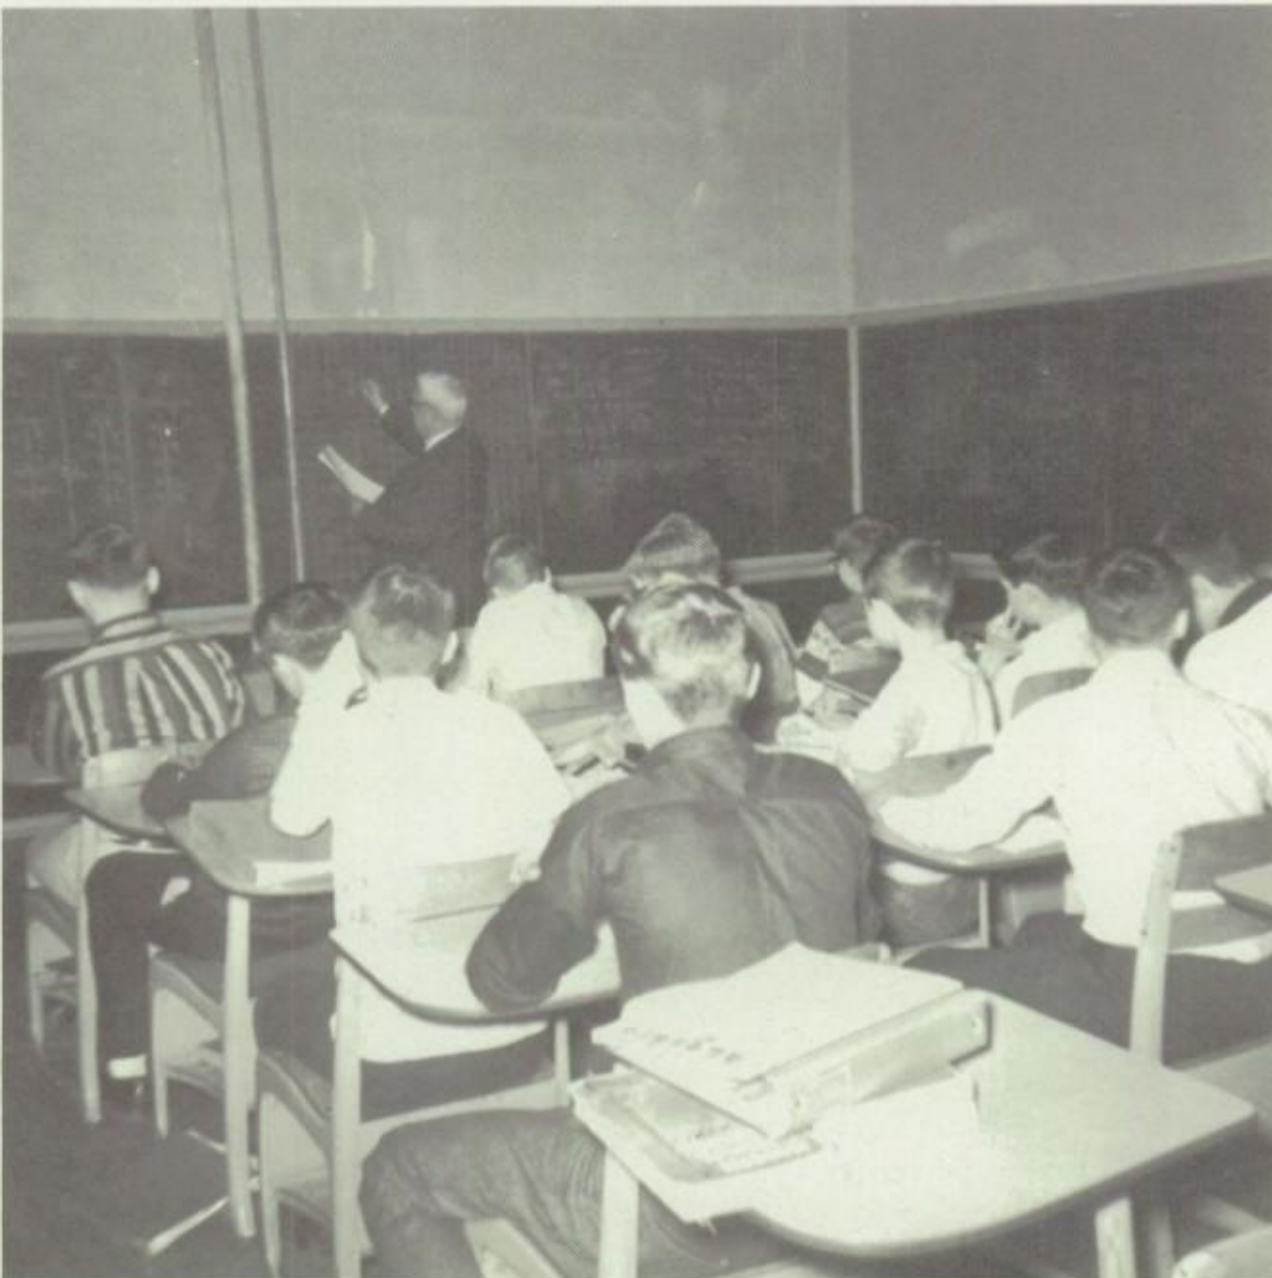

A Better World Through the Use of Science

Learning the composition of the substances of every day life.

Mathematics Offers Many Vocational Opportunities

The field of mathematics is filled with many opportunities for those who seek them. The math department tried to equip students so that they can make the best of those opportunities. Algebra, which once stood as a puzzle for freshmen, now boasts students adept at finding values for given unknowns. Geometry students were knee-deep in theorems, construction of angles, and deductive reasoning.

Mr. Swatts solves an Algebra problem for his class.

Thomas D. Brumett
Superintendent

Caston District

This year as superintendent of the Caston School Corporation was the last for Mr. Thomas D. Brumett, whose resignation will be effective in June, 1965. Mr. Brumett has served the school in this position for the past six years—since the formation of the Corporation in 1959. We will all miss his fine work and leadership in supervising the activities of our school.

MRS. FRANCES ULERICK
SECRETARY TO THE SUPERINTENDENT

School Board

The Caston School Corporation has finally approved plans for a new school building accommodating grades 1 through 12. The school will be located at the Cass-Fulton County line on Highway 25.

Many new departments will be included in the building. Industrial Arts and Mechanical Drawing are two of the proposed courses.

HIGH SCHOOL

A special tribute is extended to the man who has led us through the trials of building a new and better school. It has not been easy for anyone, but it has been especially difficult for this man who has so many responsibilities.

"There is nothing more difficult to take in hand, more perilous to conduct, or more uncertain in its success, than to take the lead in the introduction of a new order of things."—Mariott.

The student body appreciates this man and his work more than they know or will ever be able to express.

Lewis Cameron

Principal

Mrs. Gelene Skinner
Secretary, South Campus

Mrs. Gelene Skinner serves as the school secretary at the South Campus and also serves as the co-ordinator for the school lunch program at all four schools. This takes a great deal of Mrs. Skinner's time and effort.

PRINCIPALS

His guidance, being assistant principal, and work as a sponsor has been a responsibility which has created an image we all respect. We will remember his numerous hours spent during which he helped many students plan their future.

His method, like that of George Bernard Shaw's, is to take the utmost trouble to find the right thing to say, and then to say it with the utmost brevity.

During the short time we have known this man, we have come to know him as a memorable friend.

Kenneth Hattery

Juniors

Early in the year, the Junior Class of Caston High School selected ten of its members, five from each campus, to serve on a steering committee. This committee in turn, elected from among its members the officers of the class, and together they made most of the business decisions of the class. Highlighting many of the meetings of the steering committee was the discussion of the Junior-Senior Prom, which was held in the spring of the year.

It has indeed been a busy year for our Juniors.

The selling of magazines served as the main money-making project and gave the Juniors experience in working with the public. The second semester found many of Caston's Juniors preoccupied with making plans and learning speeches for their first theatrical performance, the Junior Class Play. All in all, this year has been a very bright and successful one for the Juniors, and now preparations are being made for their final year as students of Caston High School.

Sophomores

The Sophomores of the North and South campuses were combined this year into one class consisting of seventy-four members. A steering committee of ten popularly-elected class members, five from each campus, carried on the business of the class, electing its officers and making its decisions. Among these decisions was the selection of the Sophomores' pride and joy—their American Beauty class rings.

Freshmen

To a Freshman, the first year of high school is usually filled with more excitement, more privileges, and more responsibilities than any other year to date. This year's Freshmen at Caston High were no exception to this rule.

Unlike the three upper grades at the high school, the Freshmen of the two campuses were not combined this year, but rather, remained as two separate classes. As such, they competed in such things as athletics, but all were proud to be called the Freshmen of Caston High School.

Anxious anticipation of Initiation Day kept school life interesting for our ninth graders for the whole first semester, but finally the memorable day arrived, and our Freshmen now felt accepted as a real part of the high school.

A new-found freedom in choice of subjects confronted the Freshmen as they laid their educational plans for their high school years. Each class also had a student council representative who participated in the government of the school.

Eighth Grade

With the realization that their grade school days are nearly over and that high school is just around the corner, our eighth graders could more readily grasp the importance of having an education and of their own responsibilities for getting one.

Though Caston's eighth graders were two separate classes on two separate campuses this year, they look forward to their high school years when they can work together and unite as one class.

Eighth grade energy was focused mainly on educational studies, because, since they had no definite need for class money, by decision of the student council, they could not have a money-making project. Activities of the eighth graders consisted of class parties, one a semester for each of the two classes, which were financed by individual donations.

Seventh Grade

Certainly all Seventh Graders will agree with the statement "there's quite a difference between elementary and junior high." Suddenly all the other students around you seem so much bigger than you are, and for the first few weeks of school, you're sure you'll be lost in the scramble. Seventh graders now have the advantage of already being familiar with the departmentalized system of courses which makes the adjustment to junior high minimal.

The Seventh Graders of the two campuses were two separate classes, each having its own officers, activities, and athletics. Certain high school organizations, such as the band, were open to this class as well as to the five other secondary grades. Several seventh graders participated as regular members or as alternates in the marching and concert bands.

Our Seventh Graders have made a fine start this year in junior high. Their remaining years at Caston High School should be very successful.

Sixth Graders Prepared

The Caston Elementary fourth, fifth, and sixth graders study and learn under a departmentalized system of education. This system is advantageous to the students, as well as to the teachers. Under this system, it is hoped that pupils will learn to study independently and to become aware of their own responsibilities for getting their work done. They are put more on their own and are made to feel capable of using their own judgments as well as learning to depend more upon themselves rather than others.

for Junior High School

Also, much of the confusion and bewilderment of promotion into junior high school is avoided when the students are already familiar with the departmentalized system which is used there. For the teachers, this system is advantageous too, for it means having to prepare lessons, experience, dramatization, and other educational aids in only one field of study, rather than in several. Also, to be very effective, a teacher should specialize in one department, rather than try to teach efficiently a whole curriculum of studies.

Visual Aids Helped Fifth

The Caston Elementary at both the North and South campuses teaches to its top three grades under this system mathematics, reading, English, social studies, and sciences.

In the mathematics department, visual aids are employed to help the students with their arithmetic problems. The pupils develop a mathematical vocabulary which they use in class recitation, Workbooks are used to aid in the learning process, and tests are given at the close of each unit.

In the reading department, much emphasis is placed on vocabulary and the new words introduced in each story.

Grade Students Learn

The stories are read silently to develop skill in gaining information by this method, and they are read aloud in class to encourage fluent reading, good expression, and use of phonetic rules.

In the English department, the students are taught the art of writing and speaking the English language correctly. The basic rules for correct usage, which will be reviewed throughout the students' educational years, are introduced and used. The pupils gain control over communication in several of its forms.

Departmentalization Started

In the social studies department, students make use of such visual aids as pictures, maps and globes to help in gaining knowledge and interest in their studies of man's history. Learning of the development of our civilization and of history as it happened builds a sense of pride in our country and love for freedom in each student.

In the science department student participation is, perhaps at its best. Here, class recitation, student reports and experiments keep the interest and the enthusiasm for learning alive. Questions about the basic why's of nature are answered, and an interest in science is developed.

with the Fourth Graders

Art is taught to the elementary students to bring out their creative talents. The top three grades also have extra-curricular activities which they may participate in if they wish. These include competitive sports such as basketball which brings the elementary Comets up against teams of other grade schools. Also important is the extra-curricular activities, namely the band and chorus, which start the student on the road to development of his musical talents. The elementary chorus is well known for its excellent singing at various churches in the Caston area, and the band has presented some fine concerts. Both the band and the chorus have entered and placed well in district contests.

Third Graders Advanced Their

For our Caston Elementary third graders, this was the last year of having all their classes in one room under one teacher. Carrying a full curriculum they advanced to higher levels the knowledge they had gained in the different subject areas in their first and second years. In arithmetic, they learned to borrow and carry in addition and subtraction, and also, they began learning multiplication and division. In reading, which is probably the most important subject taught in grade three, the students learned to divide words into syllables and to recognize the accented syllable.

Knowledge to Higher Levels

In science, visual aids such as movies provided a means of keeping the pupils understanding of the subject clear.

For each season of the year, the third graders made a mural for the front of their room, which symbolized a particular holiday or event. This helped greatly to keep the students interest alive, as well as making the room more pleasant. Also helpful in encouraging individual participation was the use of student projects to decorate the room.

Reading Was the Main Center of

For Second Graders, school has become less of a novelty and more of an accepted fact. With the fine program of curricular and extra-curricular activities planned and carried out for them this year, they were sure to be as enthusiastic as they were about school.

Reading was, perhaps, the main center of attention this year for our second graders. They worked to increase their vocabularies and developed their abilities to work out new words and meaning through contest, association, and phonetic analysis.

Attention for Second Graders

Also very important in the course of study for the second graders was learning how to write rather than to print.

Parties given for the students in the classrooms do much to keep the young faces smiling and the attitudes toward school favorable. Also, the second graders test and develop their creative abilities by making decorations for their class rooms.

Second graders were included in a fine Christmas program given this year featuring the first three grades of the Caston Elementary Schools.

First Graders Enter

A whole new world opens suddenly for young six year-old students as they walk into their first grade classrooms for the first time. Despite their experience in kindergarten and all they've heard about school, each must discover for himself what being a student actually means to him.

Here, without realizing it, the first-grade student begins laying the basis for his growth in knowledge through his educational years. Mental ability tests are given by the teacher to help her establish, among other things, how much can be expected of the child and his rate of learning.

a Whole New World

One important subject taught to first graders is phonics, which is the study of speech sounds. Also, with the help of games, workbooks, tests, dramatization, and audio-visual aids, first-graders learn word recognition and interpretation, counting, basic addition and subtraction, science, and health.

Also taught in the first-grade year, are: getting along well, both at play and at work with fellow students; the give and take of friendship; and the definite need for obedience to authority—be it a teacher or a parent.

Our Task Is Now Completed

A rewarding moment comes now for us as we see you, our fellow students, reading and enjoying this 1965 Exodus. It is rewarding because we can realize now that all our efforts and time spent have fulfilled their purpose. We remember with triumphant yet relieved smiles the trying hours we spent on discouraging layouts, on confusing copy, and on hard-to-meet deadlines, but your enthusiasm on receiving our finished product makes it worthwhile to us. It is our hope that the pictures we have had taken and the copy we have written help to make your most precious school day memories live forever for you. In future years, these pages will mean even more to you and to us than they do now, and we will be doubly pleased to remember the hours we spent planning and preparing them for you.

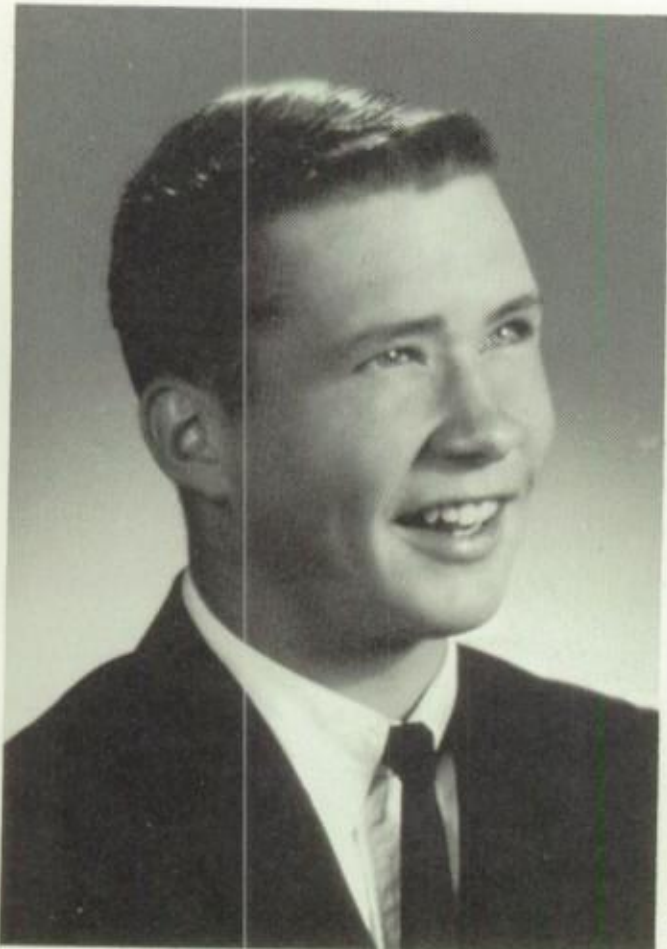

We wish to thank our yearbook sponsor, Mr. C. L. Berdine, our fellow members of the Exodus Staff, the faculty members and student bodies of the two campuses, our advertisers, and Burgman Studio of Logansport for all the help and co-operation we have received this year in our work on the new Exodus. May it mean as much to you as we planned for it to.

Sincerely,

Mike Boldry and Jeannie Lemmon

This Year at Caston

Is nearly through

Write me a note

To remind me of you.

This year has been a special one

With memories galore

Sign your name for friendship

That will grow forever more.
